I Am An American Day May 18

For the third successive year, the people of the United States will celebrate I AM AN AMERICAN DAY, on May 18. The President, at the request of the Congress, has just issued a proclamation to that effect.

I AM AN AMERICAN DAY has special significance this year. Probably never in the history of the United States has American citizenship and its implications meant more than it does today. In times like these, when our Democracy stands out in strong contrast to governments that have subjugated their people, it is important to observe and commemorate the privileges of American citizenship as widely as possible.

The Department of Justice of which the Immigration and Naturalization Service is a part, wishes to do everything it can to encourage observance of I AM AN AMERICAN DAY in every community. The ceremonies and celebrations will be sponsored by national and local organizations, such as civic clubs, patriotic organizations, fraternal societies, schools social agencies and other interested groups in each community.

I AM AN AMERICAN DAY has nation wide interest, for it affects directly two large groups of new citizens in the United States: those who have been born in the United States and have recently attained the full rights of citizenship by reaching their twenty-first birthday; and those who, having been born in foreign countries, have recently proved their fitness for membership in our Democracy and have been inducted into the full rights of citizenship by a naturalization court. These two groups number more than two and a half million people. Actually, I AM AN AMERICAN DAY affects all of us, for it helps bring home the value and responsibilities of our citizenship and it gives us an opportunity to welcome into our American membership those who have become citizens in the past year.

In making I AM AN AMERICAN DAY as successful and as widely celebrated as it deserves to be, the newspapers are calling this to the attention of their readers.

Mail Box Improvement Week

Not long ago Dave Jones, who issues sage communications regarding rural matters wrote:

"Nothing does more to detract from a farm's appearance than a run down mail box. That little box that stands by the roadside out in front of your home tells people a lot about you. If it is kept neatly painted, it reflects that same quality to the name that is neatly stenciled on it. If the post is straight and the approach is neatly stenciled to permit access in all kinds of weather, it reflects a businesslike attitude on the part of the owner and usually means that those same qualities will be found in and around the home."

The Post Office Department desires to encourage rural patrons to improve the appearance of their property as well as the streets upon which they reside by the erection of approved mail boxes and maintained in such a manner as to be accessible to the carrier and to properly protect mail placed in them in all kinds of weather.

All patrons should stencil their names on the side of the box visible to the carrier as he approaches, and the box and its support should be kept neatly painted white and the box signal painted red.

In order to accomplish a betterment in the general appearance of boxes, patrons are requested during the week of May 5th to 12th to meet the suggestions outlined above and more concisely enumerated below:

1. Untidy boxes and supports should be painted white and names stenciled on boxes in neat back letters visible to the carrier as he approaches.

2. Erect a new box if your present box is not weather proof. The large number Two box should be erected FORTY-SIX inches above the ground level, measuring from the level of street to bottom of box. The smaller number ONE box should be erected FORTYEIGHT inches above the street level, measuring from the level of the street to bottom of box.

2 Boxes along a state maintained concrete highway should be erected eight feet from the concrete measuring therefrom to the edge of the box. Boxes along other streets should be erected so as not to cause the carrier to interfere with the traffic while the box is being served.

4. Approaches to boxes should be maintained with weeds cut away from around the boxes so that proper service may be maintained in all kinds of weather.

If you are in doubt as to what to do, meet your carrier and he will be glad to make suggestions. This campaign is Nationwide.

THRIFT CUTS—MORE MEAT FOR YOUR MONEY
(See Recipes Below)

MEATS FOR BUDGET MEALS

If you're meat-wise, then you're budget-wise! For the less expensive cuts of meat have a way of making food dollars really s-t-r-e-t-c-h.

What's more, the thrift cuts of meat are equally as chock full of flavor, health-giving vitamins, body-building proteins and minerals as the more expensive ones. When you buy a chuck roast instead of chops; hamburger instead of steak; or baby beef liver instead of calves liver, your economy isn't depriving your family or guests of even a teeny, weeny bit of food value. That's the verdict of nutrition experts. And they know.

Economy in purchasing meat comes from knowing the wide variety of different meat cuts available, and from purchasing some of the cuts which are not in greatest demand. For example, a pot roast of beef, delicious as it is and as much as it is enjoyed by everyone, sells for considerably less per pound than a rib roast of beef. The reason, of course, is that there is a greater demand for rib roast.

You'll surely be pleased, and surprised, too, at the way you can save money on your food budget, at the same time adding variety to both your family and company meals, by following today's penny-pincher recipes.

Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb.
How to Buy: Good quality lamb is pinkish and well-marbled with fat. Outside fat is smooth, hard, glossy and cream-white. Look for both government inspection stamp and packer's private grade stamp. Find the grade that suits you, then always buy it. Ask your meat man to bone the shoulder, leaving a cavity to fill with stuffing. (You can use the bones for broth, soup or gravy stock.)

How to Cook: Prepare a well-seasoned stuffing; fill cavity, then sew up edges or skewer in place. Weigh meat after stuffing to compute cooking time. Place fat side up on rack in open pan, rub with salt and pepper. Cook in slow oven (325 degrees F.), allowing about 35 minutes per pound. Garnish with mint leaves and a vegetable; serve. Delicious!

Dressing for Lamb.
2 slices bacon
2 cups bread crumbs
1 cup soup apples, chopped
1 cup raisins
½ cup celery, chopped
Fry bacon until crisp and add to bread crumbs, raisins, diced apples and celery. Season with salt and pepper and pile lightly into cavity in lamb shoulder.

Eye-of-Round Roast.
How to Buy: The lean of beef should be well-marbled with fat, firm, smooth, glossy; soon after the meat is cut, the surface should turn bright red. The outer fat should be fairly thick, firm, flaky, cream-white. In lower grades fat is softer, yellower. Though price per pound will perhaps exceed that of rib roast, it is all solid meat—no bones, no fat, no waste of any kind.

LYNN SAYS:

Spread apple or crabapple jelly over the top of roasting ham, veal or pork for the last 30 minutes. The jelly gives an appetizing flavor and a glossy brown top. Crumbled bacon adds a wonderful new flavor to cooked green beans, yellow or white squash, browned navy beans or spinach. Add the bacon in the last 5 minutes. Long, slow cooking at a low heat is the general rule for cooking the thrifty cuts of meat. Ranking low on the butcher's price list but high in nutrition are such meats as kidney, brains, heart and liver. They make delicious dishes when properly cooked.

PERFECT RACKET

By RICHARD WILKINSON

(Associated Newspapers.)
WNU Service.

"WANTED: Young man with $500 to invest to manage motion picture business."

The young man with the glasses, who said his name was Melvin Byers, looked up questioningly into Mr. Rance Ackert's eyes.

Mr. Ackert nodded impatiently. "Yes, yes. That's the advertisement I inserted in the newspaper. But, as I've already told you, I've decided upon one of the fifty odd men who applied earlier in the week. You can't expect to answer an ad in a week-old newspaper and find the job still vacant, young man."

"But I didn't have the money a week ago, Mr. Ackert. I've just succeeded in raising it. Moreover, I'm sure I'm the man you want. All I ask is a trial. I'll prove my worth to you."

Melvin Byers let his eyes wander about the room, his gaze resting fondly upon the battery of cameras that lined the wall, the sections of scenery stacked neatly in a corner, the large gaudily colored portraits of famous stars that hung from the ceiling.

Mr. Ackert drummed on his desk and thought rapidly. After all, he told himself, $500 was $500. And this youth acted like a push-over, a much easier push-over than any of the other twenty motion picture managers he had hired during the past six days.

Mr. Ackert reflected momentarily on his week's receipts. There had been twenty-five applicants as the result of his advertisement. Ten of them had been completely taken in—had plunked down their $500 and promised to come to work on the fol-

Bald-headed, short, fat Mr. Ackert chortled happily as he fingered the five $100 bills.

Monday. Five more were hooked for $300 each, with promises of raising the remaining $200 within another week's time. Five more had come through with amounts varying from $250 to as low as $75. The remaining five had merely promised to raise the necessary funds if given a little time.

These latter—the non-paying five—were worthless as far as Mr. Ackert was concerned. For on Sunday preceding the Monday when all twenty "managers" were scheduled to report for duty, Mr. Ackert expected to be winging his way to Mexico, carrying with him the $7,500 which the racket had netted. His total overhead had amounted to less than $500. Which wasn't bad, but was downright poor compared to the old days.

Melvin Byers was watching Mr. Ackert earnestly. "I'm the man you want, Mr. Ackert. Just let me prove it."

Mr. Ackert sat suddenly forward, as if he had reached an abrupt though perhaps too hasty decision. "Very well, young man, you shall have your chance. I'll briefly outline the plan and you can make your own decision. As you may know, I am the eastern representative of the Acme Films of Hollywood. Recently we decided to establish studios in New England, with Boston as our headquarters, and I was invested with the job of attending to details. I immediately made a survey of conditions, found them to be entirely satisfactory to our requirements and went ahead with plans.

"A month ago the Acme Film people met with reverses and wired me to postpone the opening of the Boston office until further orders were received. However, my plans here had developed to such an extent and conditions were so indicative of the success of the venture, that I decided to go ahead on my own initiative. I needed $500 in cash, and a general manager. Whoever cared to invest that amount of money, providing he qualified as a general manager, would, of course, be assured of a most remunerative income and lifetime position. Besides this, his initial investment would be returned within six months time by the Acme Film people, who, I happen to know, are rapidly overcoming their difficulties."

Mr. Ackert paused and watched the eager face across his desk. Melvin Byers' eyes were shining. "Why, that's a splendid opportunity, Mr. Ackert! Just the sort of opening I've always wanted. I'd appreciate it immensely if you'd give me a chance."

Inwardly Mr. Ackert smiled. It would take a shrewd man to put over a fast one on one of these Boston Yankees, he'd heard. Mr. Ackert almost chuckled. Why, it wasn't three years since he'd worked an entirely different racket right here in this city of Boston. Hooked a youth quite like this Melvin Byers chap for five grand. Some sort of a mining racket, as he remembered it. And they said you couldn't hook a Yankee!

Mr. Ackert smiled inwardly. "Very well, Mr. Byers. You may pay in your $500 now and report for duty Monday morning. Your salary to start will be $75 per week, and expenses. Is that satisfactory?"

"You bet it is!" Melvin Byers reached into an inside pocket and produced an envelope which contained five $100 bills. Mr. Ackert glanced at the money with a phlegmatism born of long practice, drew a large book from his desk and scratched off a receipt. Next he produced a contract, filled in the blank spaces, signed it and handed it over to the youth to read. Melvin Byers glanced over the agreement, signed it with his own fountain pen and returned the sheet to Mr. Ackert. Mr. Ackert had meanwhile filled out and signed a second contract which he gave the young man to keep.

The two then shook hands. Mr. Ackert explained that they could go over the details of the work on Monday, and Mr. Byers departed.

Bald-headed, short, fat Mr. Ackert chortled happily as he fingered the five $100 bills. Well, there was the overhead money. Everything that was in the bank could now be considered net profit.

Perhaps it would be better to leave tonight rather than to wait until Sunday. There was a plane scheduled to take off for Chicago at six. Mr. Ackert picked up his telephone, but hesitated as a knock sounded at the door. The expression on his face changed to one of surprise, and as Mr. Melvin Byers stepped into the room, followed by a uniformed police officer.

"There he is, officer," said Mr. Byers. "If you don't believe me, search him!"

The officer advanced across the floor and Mr. Ackert stood up.

"Did you," said the officer, "just purchase a fountain pen from this young man?"

Mr. Ackert's mouth sagged open. Before he could reply, Mr. Melvin Byers picked up a pen that was lying on Mr. Ackert's desk. It was the pen with which the youth had signed the contract.

"Here it is, officer, the very pen. Look, it's brand new!"

The officer looked, and scowled at Mr. Ackert. Mr. Byers was speaking again. "There's some money on the desk now! Take a look at it, officer."

The officer forthwith stretched forth a hand and plucked from under Mr. Ackert's nose the five $100 bills. He examined them, holding each up to the light. Presently he turned.

"Counterfeit. Get your hat, mister. We're going to the station. Now I understand the money isn't yours. Of course not. But you can explain that to the sergeant. Maybe you can talk yourself out of it in a day or two. According to this young chap, you'll have plenty of talking to do."

Mr. Melvin Byers nodded agreeably and grinned. "A day or two will be plenty. Just keep him until Monday morning. I have an idea there'll be quite a gathering up here Monday morning, and everyone who gathers will want to have a word with Mr. Ackert."

He grinned, removing his glasses. "Remember three years ago, Mr. Ackert, and the mining stock racket? You got the jump on us that time, but we knew you'd be back."

Huge Spider in Brazil Catches Birds in Web

In some tropical forests, spiders spin webs of such size that it is hard, or at least unpleasant, for a traveler to pass. No spider webs, however, are strong enough to entrap a human being, whether young or old.

Flies, mosquitoes, and other insects are the victims usually caught by spiders. Their webs are spun with the special purpose of obtaining a food supply.

In the abdomen of a spider are openings known as "spinnerets." Usually there are four or six of them, close together. A liquid is pressed from each opening, and it at once hardens into a silken strand. The strands combine into a single thread.

Dozens of kinds of webs are made by spiders. Among these the web of the common garden spider is noted for its fine pattern.

A framework is made first, the lines being fastened to objects such as branches of a plant. Later the garden spider spins thread to make a spiral figure. The framework may make a person think of the spokes of a wheel.

Although insects are the usual victims, some spiders go after larger game. I am thinking chiefly of "bird-catching spiders."

Bird-catching spiders are found in Brazil and certain other lands in the torrid zone. They grow to great size, the body being about two inches long and the legs spreading out two or three inches on each side of the body.

Bird-catching spiders have large, strong fangs. Some natives of the tropics are said to use the fangs as toothpicks. Of course that does not take place until the fangs and the spider have been separated!

Bird-catching spiders spin heavy webs, and there are times when small birds, such as hummingbirds, are trapped in them.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Probation After Death" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 27.

The Golden Text was, "God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power" (I Corinthians 6:14).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils. And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept" (Mark 16:9, 10).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus' unchanged physical condition after what seemed to be death was followed by his exaltation above all material conditions; and this exaltation explained his ascension, and revealed unmistakably a probationary and progressive state beyond the grave. Jesus was 'the way'; that is, he marked the way for all men" (p. 46).

(COPYRIGHT BARCUS, KINDRED & CO.)

STARTLING shifts in the sources of Illinois' revenue between 1930 and 1940 are illustrated in the above chart prepared by Barcus, Kindred & Company, Chicago, specialists in Illinois municipal bonds. Changes in the purposes for which state funds are spent also are pictured.

The significance of these developments from the standpoint of municipal bonds is that the huge sums representing tax refunds and state aid for school districts and local road maintenance strengthen the bonds of the local communities receiving such assistance. These donations represent money these communities would otherwise have to raise by levying taxes.

Study of the 10-year trend shows that:

54 per cent of Illinois' 1940 state income was derived from taxes not in existence ten years ago. (Retailer's sales tax, liquor tax, utility tax and Federal aid for old age assistance.)

More than one-third of the 1940 state expenditures went for purposes non-existent in 1930—namely emergency relief and old age assistance.

The 1940 state income and outgo were more than double those of 1930.

State property taxes a no longer levied.

State bonds are no longer issued to defray highways construction costs and other state expenses.

During the decade Illinois shifted to a pay-as-you-go basis. The state government met emergency expenditures, regular budget items and costs of highways, education, etc., out of current tax revenues.

Illinois Records Big Increase in Municipally-Owned Water Systems

MUNICIPALLY owned water systems in Illinois have nearly doubled in number since 1910, it is revealed in the above chart prepared by Barcus, Kindred & Company, Chicago municipal bond house. Last year, 586 out of 643 water systems in the state or 91 per cent were municipally owned and operated.

Principal factors in the increasing tendency in recent years of municipalities to operate their own water systems were:

1. Financing of these projects on a "self-liquidating" basis through the issuance of revenue bonds.
2. Federal grants to cities for municipal improvements.

Illustrative of the trend is the fact that the total amount of water revenue bonds outstanding in 1940 was $47,139,200, or more than three times the 1927 total of $14,045,200.

DOWNSTATE AREAS SHOW 99 PER CENT PAYMENT ON BONDS

CHICAGO. — That interest and principal payments were met on more than 99 per cent of the total amount of general obligation bonds outstanding in downstate Illinois between 1930 and 1939, is indicated by a survey made public here by Barcus, Kindred & Company, municipal bond specialists.

Not once during the ten years did past-due principal payments reach 1 per cent of the total general obligation debt of downstate taxing districts, according to the survey, based on figures of the Illinois Tax Commission.

"Illinois' fine record," says the survey, "has been largely due to the high rate of tax collections throughout the state. Of importance, too, have been extensive refinancing programs, refunding bonds at a lower interest rate."

Southern Cities Lead U. S.

In Approving Bond Issues

Southern cities are more likely to approve bond issue proposals than municipalities in any other section of the United States, it is revealed in a survey made public here by Barcus, Kindred & Company, municipal bond house of Chicago.

The survey shows that 67 bond issues totaling $38,118,000 were approved by voters in cities over 25,000 population throughout the United States last year. Southern cities accounted for 52 of the approved issues, amounting to $30,647,000.

Rapid civic and industrial development in recent years is cited as the principal reason for the South's leadership in approving municipal bond issue proposals. The survey is based on U. S. Census data.

Downstate's Share of School Debt Falls, While Cook County's Rises

(COPYRIGHT BARCUS, KINDRED & CO.)

HOW downstate's share of the Illinois school debt has shown a marked decrease while Cook county's share has risen sharply during the past ten years is shown by the above chart prepared by statisticians of Barcus, Kindred & Company, Chicago municipal bond house.

In 1930, downstate municipalities owed 71 per cent of the entire school debt, while Cook county owed only 29 per cent. Today the situation is changed. Cook county's share is 57 per cent, while the downstate portion has been reduced to 43 per cent.

In the actual amount of school bonds outstanding, the ten-year shift is even more startling. Downstate municipalities showed a decrease of $22,900 in the amount of school bonds outstanding between 1930 and 1940. Cook county, on the other hand, registered an increase of $44,427,600.

INCREASED TREND TO REVENUE BONDS SHOWN DOWNSTATE

CHICAGO. — Downstate Illinois recorded a five-fold increase in the amount of revenue bonds outstanding between 1930 and 1940, while Cook county's total was not quite doubled, according to a survey made by Barcus, Kindred & Company, municipal bond house.

Ten years ago downstate municipalities had $5,606,100 in revenue bonds outstanding. By 1940 their total had risen to $30,101,400.

A decade ago, Cook county municipalities had $18,694,600 in revenue bonds outstanding. By 1940 they had $34,963,200.

The trend toward revenue financing has been largely due to more favorable investor reception. Of high importance, however, has been the tendency of municipalities to help finance new improvements with Federal grants.

WHY WAR?

"Just why should my brother or my son or myself shoulder a gun and cross the Atlantic Ocean to war?" is a question many American men are asking themselves today. They read the newspapers and listen to the radio and they are aware that a great crisis confronts the nation. They know that there is considerable agitation to throw the country into the European conflict, but they aren't sure just why.

"Why, brother," says the war-monger, "Don't you see that we have to get in to preserve the freedom and liberty of our country? Don't you understand that the Allies are fighting for us and the cause of democracy? We have to save them and us from dictatorship!"

Thus, with hysteria and false charges of peril, the very small power group hopes to throw this huge country into a struggle which does not belong to us, which will not be fought on American ground and which is anything but a fight for democracy.

Who says the Allies are democracies? Greece isn't. Turkey isn't. As for England, let us take the word of one of the most prominent statesmen of the British Empire, Mr. Anthony Eden. Addressing the House of Commons in 1928, Mr. Eden said:

"We do not have democratic government in this country today; we never have had it and I venture to suggest to the honorable Members opposite that we shall never have it. What we have done, in all the progress of reform and evolution of politics, is to broaden the basis of our oligarchy."

Since he made that speech, Mr. Eden served England as Foreign Secretary, and his words are those of a high ranking government official. Let us hope that Mr. Eden will not forget his admission that the British government is an oligarchy and ask us to come over and save democracy. The dictionary defines an oligarchy as a form of government in which the power is vested in a few.

That would make it appear that we cannot send our men and boys to defend democracy for England when England doesn't have it now, never did have it, and in the opinion of their own leaders, never will have it.

Robert M. Hutchins, President of the University of Chicago, a man whose renown as an educator does not need enlargement, used these wise words in summing up the situation a short time ago. He said:

"There can be no doubt that the people of this country prefer the government of Britain to the government of its allies or its enemies. Britain is a constitutional state and has been the inspiration of many constitutional states. We prefer the governments of China, Greece and Turkey to those of the Axis. But we cannot use the word democracy to describe every country that is or may be at war with the Axis. If Russia is attacked by Germany, will she be welcomed into the choir of the democracies?"

"If we go to war, what are we going to war for? The British propose to defeat the Axis. What they propose to do then they do not say. They have repeatedly refused to say. Yet the United States is entitled to know. Are we to rush to arms every time the British Empire is in danger? If so, we are entitled to know what the future policy of the British Empire is to be. Are we to put down every tyrant that rises in Europe? If so, we are entitled to know what is to be done to keep each tyrant from being worse than the last."

Mr. Hutchins brings out a sore point there. In 1917 we entered a bloody struggle to conquer another tyrant whose character was no better than the tyrant of today. Fifty thousand American men met death and almost 200,000 more were wounded in that conflict which failed to accomplish its purpose. It didn't save democracy and it didn't prevent the rise of another tyrant. In fact, the new tyrant occupied a powerful position less than two decades after the shooting had stopped.

You never hear the spreaders of hate refer to those fifty thousand dead American men who met their horrible death in vain. You never hear a reference to the veteran's hospitals throughout the country filled with men who will never lose the shock and the blindness and the hopeless injury which that last holocaust left them.

Many of you remember the horror of that war and you know this one exceeds its brutality and terrible suffering a hundredfold. Everyone suffers today. Screaming dive bombers send death to women and children huddling in fright in their own homes. The unleashed fury of an air raid in a great city brings death and destruction to the family hearth. Little children are brought up in the awful atmosphere of terror. Covering in underground holes like rats, they are taught to hate. And hatred entering a youthful mind is not easily, if ever, lost.

Let's keep our children from the world of terror. American youth is on a high standard of its own, we must not lower it for the selfish aims of greedy men, steeped in blood and determined to hurl us into another conflagration.

Anyone advocating war, be he official, citizen, preacher or what not should be handed a gun and told to get into the fight first and also to sign all his possessions and riches over to the government for taxes. No these war gods stay at home and make their riches at the expense of the common man. Everyone who is for war is a MURDERER, for war is MURDER and nothing else and men the world over are damn fools to kill each other for any government or click of war gods. Men the world over must throw down their guns and refuse to fight if sanity and peace is to come into the world.

We must remain sane in a mad world. We must realize the futility of entering the quarrels of Europe and we must present a firm stand against such an entrance. We must guard against incidents which would provoke our forces from going to battle and we must prepare an impregnable defense for this nation which would make it impossible for any foreign power or group of powers to attack us.

One of the strongest schemes of the bloodthirsty minority to throw us into conflict is the use of American ships as convoys. It stands to reason that if our vessels are so used there will be shooting, and shooting means death. Death of any American sailors in such an incident will go a long way toward provoking the public into a frenzy, demanding vengeance and war. It has happened before and it can happen again if we don't do something about it.

As American citizens we can do something about it. We have the right to express our will in the affairs of government and the will of the people rules this country. Band together with other loyal Americans in keeping America from the ruin of war. Do it now, even the seconds count. Let us promote the cause of peace and thru peace make our America first among the nations of the world.

Write, wire or call on your representative in Washington. Arouse your friends and neighbors to help you and themselves in this all-important fight for our rights, our freedom, our lives and our country.

WRITE, WRITE, WRITE! No Convoys—NO WAR!

KING AND QUEEN OF DANCE . . .

Veloz and Yolanda, America's greatest exponents of modern dancing, return to Chicago for a limited engagement of eight performances at Orchestra Hall, opening Saturday evening, May 6th at 8:30 p. m.

This visit Veloz and Yolanda bring a complete entertainment to the theatre of "Dance Americana" which is another creation of these artists who have been acclaimed "the greatest living dancing couple."

Veloz and Yolanda offer for the first time in the history of the dance a program which embodies every phase of American Life.

Their present work is projecting the dance of the sophisticate, the farmyard frolic, the waltz in it's various forms, as well as the dance of the old South.

Added to the varied repertoire is the exotic South American dances, namely the rumba and tango, for which Veloz and Yolanda have no equal.

Veloz and Yolanda have been appearing in fifty key cities of the United States with this new form of entertainment. It is with pride that they return "home" to Chicago with this form of entertainment that has been given great praise in New York City as well as all the other cities in which they have been appearing. It is to the theatre of "Dance Americana" that Veloz and Yolanda are devoting their entire future as they have forsaken night club and theatre entertainment permanently. Their local Chicago visit at Orchestra Hall will mark the only Chicago appearances of Veloz and Yolanda.

Jerry Shelton world famed accordionist, will assist the dancers, Lother Perl and Sallie Richards Crown, America's most popular duo-accompanists also will be on the exciting program.

Matinees will be given on Sunday, May 11th and Saturday, May 17th at 3:00 p. m. Performances will be nightly, thru May 17th with the exception of Tuesday night, May 13th.

First Aid to The Injured

Antiseptic Treatment. Any person who gives first aid to the wounded should take every precaution possible by thoroughly cleansing his hands and nails. He should then cleanse the wounds with some antiseptic. The simplest and most easily procured is salt and water. Put a handful of salt in a quart of water and use freely. After the wound is cleansed, it must then be protected from new germs by some covering made germ-free by baking, boiling or even ironing with a hot flatiron. After the salt solution has been carefully used, apply strips of muslin or gauze soaked in warm water which has been boiled. This will leave the wound in good condition.

Important. Never try to give anyone who is unconscious anything to drink as it may choke him.

Freezing. If the extremities are frost bitten, do not go into a warm room. Rub the parts vigorously with snow or water gradually warming as the frost is driven out. Apply ointment liberally. If the entire body is badly chilled, warmth is absolutely necessary to overcome the depression which will follow. Place in a warm bath, increasing the heat until it is as hot as can be borne. Hot tea or coffee and moderate quantities of alcoholic stimulants should be given.

Heat Exhaustion. The skin becomes cold and clammy. This should be treated with plenty of fresh air but no cold applications. Give strong coffee.

Suffocation by Gas. Remove victim into the air. Perform artificial respiration as in case of drowning. Send for physician immediately. As oxygen is absolutely necessary try to get patient to hospital without delay.

Suffocation by Smoke. Take victim into the air. Perform artificial respiration as in the case of drowning. Give alcoholic stimulants.

Shock. Accidents, all severe injuries or fright may cause what is known as "shock." Keep head low. Wrap in hot, dry blankets. Apply hot water bottles or hot plates to abdomen and extremities. Apply no heat to head. If necessary give stimulants, non-alcoholic preferred. Perform artificial respiration if breathing has stopped.

Drowning. 1. Loosen clothing. 2. Empty lungs of water by laying body on its stomach and lifting by the middle so that the head hangs down. Jerk the body a few times. 3. Pull tongue forward, using handkerchief, or pin with string, if necessary. 4. Imitate motion of respiration by alternately compressing and expanding the lower ribs, about twenty times a minute. Alternately raising and lowering the arms from the sides up above the head will stimulate the action of the lungs. Let it be done gently but persistently. 5. Apply warmth and friction to extremities. 6. By holding tongue forward, closing the nostrils, and pressing the "Adam's apple" back (so as to close entrance to stomach) direct inflation may be tried. Take a deep breath and breathe it forcibly into the mouth of the patient, compress the chest to expell the air, and repeat the operation. 7. DON'T GIVE UP! People have been saved after hours of patient, vigorous effort. 8. When breathing begins get patient into a warm bed, give warm drinks, or spirits in teaspoonfuls, fresh air and quiet.

Burns and Scalds. Cover with cooking soda and lay wet cloths over it. Whites of eggs and olive oil. Olive or linseed oil, plain or mixed with chalk or whiting.

Lightning. Dash cold water over a person struck.

Sunstroke. Loosen clothing. Get patient into shade and apply ice-cold water to head.

Mad Dog or Snake Bite. Tie cord tight above the wound. Suck the wound and cauterize with caustic or white-hot iron at once, or cut out adjoining parts with sharp knife. Venomous Insects' Stings, etc. Apply weak ammonia, oil, salt water or iodine.

Fainting. Lay flat with head lower than body. Loosen clothes. Give plenty of air. Keep body warm. Bathe face and hands with cold water. While unconscious, give nothing to drink. When consciousness returns, give warm drinks or a little stimulant.

Electricity. Release from current —not touching the body or wire with hands, metal or wet stick. Handle body by its clothing, with rubber gloves and shoes if possible; if not, cover hands with dry woolen cloth and stand on dry boards. Then induce artificial respiration as in case of drowning. Rub limbs and massage body.

Fire in One's Clothing. Don't run —especially down stairs or out of doors. Roll on carpet, or wrap in woolen rug or blanket. Keep the head down so as not to inhale the stack in feet. Then multiply height by the length, which gives cubic content of clothing and air flame.

Every Registrant Must Have Certificate

Amendment of Selective Service Regulations to make it mandatory for every registrant to have his resignation certificate in his possession at all times and to present it upon request of proper authorities was announced the past week by Paul G. Armstrong, State Director of Selective Service for Illinois.

Director Armstrong made his announcement upon receipt of advice from National Headquarters which pointed out that while the old provision of the regulations said that the registrant should carry his registration certificate with him at all times as he may be required to show it from time to time, the revised Regulations provide:

"The registrant must have his registration certificate in his personal possession, or to exhibit it upon request, must exhibit it to any law enforcement officer, any Selective Service official of National Headquarters or of a State Headquarters, or any member of the local board of appeal."

Failure of a registrant to have his registration certificate in his personal possession, or to exhibit it upon request of authorized officials, will constitute a violation of the regulations and, in addition, shall be construed as prima facie evidence of his failure to register, State Director Armstrong said.

Director Armstrong also announced another amendment to the Regulations pertaining to late registration which makes it compulsory that, "Every person subject to registration who for any reason failed to register on the day fixed by the President for his registration must present himself for and submit to registration before a local Board."

"This means that every person subject to registration on Oct. 16, 1940, must register if he has not already done so," Director Armstrong declared, "It does not apply to persons who have become 21 years of age since last October as they will be required to register only if the President proclaims a second registration date."

Violation of the Regulations may cause a delinquent to be penalized by fine or imprisonment or both, Director Armstrong pointed out.

Rules for Measuring Hay

Accuracy in the measuring of hay in the stack is very difficult to obtain on account of the great variation in settlement. Therefore, the quantity in a mow or stack can only be approximately ascertained by measurement.

The laws of North and South Dakota state that a ton of hay by measurement shall consist of 343 cubic feet, after the same shall have been stacked thirty days, or such time as may be agreed upon by the parties.

In New Mexico the following rule and method of measuring loose hay in the stack has been adopted by the Government:

"Measure the stack for length, width and the 'over' (to get the 'over' throw a tape line over the stack at an average place, from the ground to ground, drawing it tightly)."

"1. Multiply the width by the 'over' and divide this result by four.
"2. Multiply the result of division by the length, for approximate cubical contents of stack.

"To reduce to tons, for hay that has stood in stack less than 20 days, divide cubical contents by 512; for more than 20 and less than 60 days divide cubical contents by 422; for more than 60 days divide cubical contents by 380."

—From Shippers Manual, Board of Trade, Chicago.

To Measure Grain In Bins

To find the number of bushels of grain in a bin, multiply the length by the width by the height, thus ascertaining the number of cubic feet and deduct one-fifth. For instance, a bin containing 10 cubic feet will hold 8 bushels of grain, 8 being four-fifths of 10.

AT THE ROXY

Again the roaring, naughty and gay '90's pass in gala review across the silver screen in "The Strawberry Blonde" upholding the superb performances of James Cagney, Olivia DeHavilland and Rita Hayworth, coming to the Roxy Theatre at Lockport, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Wednesday and Thursday, the Roxy Theatre will feature a carnival cavalcade of laughing "Road Show", with Adophe Menjou and Carole Landis.

To Measure Ear Corn In Crib

Ascertain the number of cubic feet and multiply by four, then divide by 10. Most corn in cribs is figured by this rule. However, if the cobs are well filled and the corn is sound and dry and well settled in the crib, divide by 9. If the cobs are not well filled or if the corn is damp or inferior quality, divide by 11.

Motley Army Joins English Fighting Force

Men From Many Nations Leave Homes to War Against Germany.

By ROGER SHAW

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — When the British beat Napoleon—the Hitler of his time—at Waterloo, only about half of the British army was actually British. The rest of Wellington's outfit was a strange mixture of peoples who thought they were fighting for their freedom. The list was a long one. It took in Dutchmen, Belgians, Hanoverians, Prussians, and men from Brunswick, Nassau, and Saxe-Weimar. The Hanoverians did well in the battle, but the Dutch, Belgians, and men of Nassau did very badly. After the battle, large groups of the latter were found playing cards miles back of the field of honor.

The King's German Legion was the best, and best known, of these foreign outfits under British leadership. The Legion was made up of refugees from all over the Germanies—a hodgepodge then under Napoleon's domination. The Legion served on every sort of front during the long war cycle, even acting as marines in various naval operations. They fought from the North Cape to the North African coastline, and campaigned against the Americans in 1812 and after. They were "owned," payed, and equipped by the British government, and they burned with hatred of the Hitler-like Bonaparte, who had turned their fatherlands into a "new order." The Legion, which made a specially distinguished record at Waterloo, contained Austrians and Netherlands, as well as natives of the various little Germanies.

History tends to repeat itself, and in the year 1941 the King's Legion has come to life again in various forms. The old Legion was predominantly Germanic. The new Legion, or legions, are politically anti-Germanic, but they take in a wide variety of peoples. This time they include Dutch, Belgians, Norwegians, Danes, Poles, Czechs, "free" Frenchmen, and goodness knows what else. In such cases, their countries have been overrun, and England has become the refuge—the last white hope or chance. In fighting for England, these people feel they are fighting for their own lost countries, and against the common tyrant. Today the tyrant is A. H. and not N. B., but otherwise things are much as they were a century and a third ago. In England today, there are also anti-Fascist Germans, Italians, and Austrians, who swell the alien ranks of the King's Foreign Legion. This is not an innovation, either. Anti-Fascist Frenchmen served England against Napoleon's France in the early 1800s. In short, what we are witnessing—now as then—is an international civil war.

50,000 Foreign Fighters

Today there are something like 50,000 foreign legionaries serving the British empire. Strangely enough, this is just about the same size as the King's German Legion of antiquity. These foreign legionaries might, in a sense, be considered the composite army of the late lamented League of Nations. In many cases, their dummy governments are in London or Bristol, as well as their armed representatives. The king of Norway and the queen of Holland are among the foreign-legion rulers in the British isles, as was the black Ethiopian Lion of Judah until recently—i.e. Haile Selassie.

His country was seized by the Nazis in March, 1939, but this Czechoslovakian aviator fights on as a valuable member of the Royal Air Force.

World's Largest Island Placed Under U. S. Protection

WASHINGTON.—When President Roosevelt announced that the United States would defend Greenland, he extended the scope of the Monroe Doctrine to the largest island in the world.

With a total area of 850,000 square miles, it is almost as large as the United States east of the Mississippi. More than three-fourths of this area is covered by an immense ice field. Eskimos greatly predominate

Men have come thousands of miles to fight beside the British in their war against the Axis powers. The Arab soldiers (left) are helping to defend Egypt, while the American aviators (center) and the gunner from India (right) do their part in England to keep Hitler's "luftwaffe" in check.

sie. Poland and Belgium have ambassadors to the British government, and vice versa, while Norway, Holland, and the Czechs still maintain official ministers to the Court of St. James. General De Gaulle represents the "free" Frenchman, but he has no official standing with the French Vichy government.

The foreign troops in England wear British uniforms and use British equipment, except for the officers on leave in London. They wear their fancy native garb, which seems to bore the Londoners, to a marked degree.

The Dutch are really considered the most useful, and best liked, of England's exiled allies. The English and Dutch peoples are closely akin, and follow much the same pattern of behavior. The Dutch have presented the British government with close to a million tons of commercial shipping, and some small warships to boot. The Dutch East Indies, with their oil, rubber and tin, are still independent, and they have perhaps 60,000,000 inhabitants. There are very few Dutch soldiers in England—the Dutch army lasted only four days—but the merchant fleet and colonies make up the difference. Another 2,000,000 tons of Dutch shipping are now trading on their own in the faraway Pacific area.

Norwegians Popular

Second most popular with the English people are the Norwegians. Like the "Dutchies," they, too, are chiefly nautical in their contributions. Norway has supplied England with close to 1,000 ships—something like three or four million tons of shipping. Some lesser Norwegian warcraft also are co-operating with the British navy. These are mostly destroyers, minesweepers and armed whalers with perhaps the world's best crews. The Poles, "free" French, Belgians, and Czechs are not as popular in England as the kindred Dutch and Norwegians.

The Poles are the most numerous of the alien lot, and the most boastful. They have garrisoned Scotland, and are also serving in the royal air force. They have some ships with the royal navy, and a puppet government at London. Their commander has been Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski, a good man of comparatively liberal convictions, who was on bad terms with the reckless Polish dictatorship which reigned at the beginning of the war. The Czechs, close kith and kin of the Poles, are not very many. They are largely college men and armed intellectuals—as brainy as the Poles are militaristic. Just the same, the exiled Polish and Czech governments are planning a Czech-Polish federation for the sweet by and bye after the war. Some of the Belgian politicians are actually petitioning to be taken into the British empire, with dominion status, after the shooting is shot!

These Belgians are very angry at their King, Leo, who is still in Belgium. They think, some of them, that he sold the Allies down the river—a claim which history may have a pretty hard time to substantiate. There are some Belgians in the royal air force, and elsewhere, including a few ultra-rich playboys. The "free" Frenchies are another story. The tactful British government has never known quite what to do with them.

If England is too kind to De Gaulle, who is none too popular at home, it may drive Vichy into the arms of Berlin. De Gaulle's Dakar expedition to West Africa was a terrible fiasco. De Gaulle himself is persona grata with Churchill, but not with many other Englishmen. At the same time, he tends to serve as a useful brake on the politicians and generals of Vichy. Further, the French colonies of Syria, North Africa, and Martinique, with their important armed forces, continue to be against De Gaulle, and for old Petain.

The Poles and Norwegians are reported as the toughest and most vengeful of the King's foreign legionaries. The Polish attitude is perfectly understandable. Poland has been very badly treated. In the Norse case, the pro-English Norwegians hate the pro-German Norwegians, and carry this hatred to a degree. The other exiled groups seem somewhat surprisingly indifferent at times, when viewed through excited American spectacles. Just the same, if the invasion of England ever comes, these motley groups may be counted on to fight fiercely—and no holds barred. It's their last chance this side of paradise. "Paradise," in this case, means America.

Plastics of Coffee Bring New Hope To Troubled Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO. — Brazil's greatest new industry is a demonstration of the world's most amazing scientific solution to an overproduction problem. "Coffee plastics" from which Brazil may make homes and schools, war planes and even the industrial machinery of the future, is the answer of modern science to a surplus crop problem which threatened to engulf the whole economy of Brazil and impoverish millions of her peoples!

While all Europe goes coffee-less, Brazil's great coffee industry has warehouses bulging with the 198,000,000-pound surplus left over from last year. The National Coffee department also has on hand 1,436,160,000 pounds more, purchased from despondent coffee owners in 132-pound sacks for 10 cents each! Brazil has watched a total "sacrifice quota" of 9,280,811,892 pounds of coffee go up in smoke (1930-40) in a desperate effort to stabilize her most important industry. Only a scientific miracle, such as "Cafelite" will save the bumper 1940 and the greater 1941 crops from the same disastrous end.

World Market Reduced

With an annual production of 2½ billion pounds, and a normal overproduction of 720 million pounds, the war has reduced world markets until the United States is now Brazil's only substantial customer. Add to this surplus the 805 million pounds which Europe would normally have bought this year, and you have a coffee problem that would give any country a headache!

Conditions in Brazil's great coffee states have been desperate. Groups of coffee planters petitioned for the right to uproot whole orchards of fine coffee trees, and coffee was selling on the New York Coffee exchange at lowest prices in history.

Looking ahead gloomily to the best coffee crop in years, Brazil may be literally drugged by her own coffee.

What is Brazil going to do?

Plastics Possible Solution

While secret preparations have gone on for months, in a "too-good-to-be-true" atmosphere, hope, doubt, and hope again has grown that the coffee plastics will really make all the magic things science says.

That the miracle of coffee plastics will save this wanton destruction of coffee money, has been the hope of every coffee planter and laborer, watching the great barn-like buildings rise on barren lands outside Sao Paulo, seeing great crates of machinery arrive from the U. S.

The new Cafelite is heat-resisting, and thus excellent for Brazil's warmer climate. It is noise-proof, and may save the nerves of Brazilians from the increasing racket of city traffic. It is proof against termites and other pests who destroy homes and furniture in warmer climates. It may be made in a whole range of lovely "bathroom" colors, or combined with other substances to imitate wood or wallpaper.

It was discovered by a clever young North American, Herbert Spencer Polin, while doing research for the American Coffee corporation, in his floating yacht laboratory and rushed to Brazil.

Plumbing fixtures made of coffee plastics would be a God-send for millions of Brazilians living in the far interior, and for cheap apartment homes too. Cabinets, electrical appliances, kitchen equipment, furniture, school and hospital equipment, perhaps whole homes and apartments of the future will be made out of surplus coffee!

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Increased U. S. aid to Britain likely in near future . . . Washington considers moving Interstate Commerce Commission to Chicago.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON. — How soon will we be "in the war"? That is the big question now in Washington. No longer "if," but "when." All this, of course, is unofficial. Officially the administration still keeps up the old pretense that it can keep out of it.

A certainty for the near future is the shipment of supplies across the Pacific and beyond, either via the Red sea and Suez or to Euphrates ports. This will take a lot of ships. It's a long round trip, and so takes a lot of bottoms to handle any quantity of cargo as compared with transatlantic service.

Very soon now we will be releasing more small naval craft to Britain. As one looks back at the hue and cry raised on Capitol Hill about those small torpedo craft, which resulted in an order that they should not be turned over to the British, there is a serio-comic touch. It will be remembered that these little vessels were built on British blueprints. There never was any intention to use them for the U. S. navy until congress raised a fog about it.

Incidentally the boats were equipped with 18-inch torpedo tubes. Our naval experts don't like 18-inch torpedoes. We use 21-inch projectiles. We didn't have any torpedoes to fit these boats, and did not intend to have any.

SMALL CRAFT VALUABLE

So now that the smoke has cleared away these boats will probably be turned over to the British, and this time there may be some speeches by such senators as David I. Walsh of Massachusetts and Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, but it won't mean very much.

Britain obviously needs these small craft, ideal for chasing submarines, very badly. So she will get them and others besides this batch, which was actually intended for her all the time.

Obviously little boats which can destroy submarines are ideal for convoys, a few of them being much better than a battleship. This is especially true because a battleship is such an important item in war that too much pains has to be taken to protect it. What Britain lacks are destroyers and other small craft to protect convoys.

The greatest need of all is bottoms to get the supplies through. Every time a little submarine chaser succeeds in eliminating one of these Nazi menaces it saves freighters from that moment on until the end of the war. Not only that, but every time a submarine fails to return to its base it has a certain effect on the morale of other U-boat crews.

Consider Moving I. C. C. to Chicago

There is serious talk of moving the Interstate Commerce commission, lock, stock and barrel, from Washington to Chicago. The argument for the change is the real railroad center of the country—that individuals would find Chicago much more convenient, as far as time and expense are concerned. And finally, that there is no particular reason why the I.C.C. should be in Washington anyhow.

This is rather interesting at the moment for a larger reason. President Roosevelt is about to ask congress for another reorganization bill. It will be recalled that the President resents the notion that there are so many administrative boards and bodies in the government over which he has no direct control. Of course, in virtually all instances, he appoints the members in the first place, but that is not enough, in his opinion, for an integrated administration. He would prefer to have all these boards and commissions made a part of existing departments, so that their work would head up to him for final approval in important cases.

When the President lost his first reorganization bill fight the handwriting was very clear so far as congressional intentions were concerned. There never was a time when there was any chance that congress would pass the bill without listing some exceptions. One of these was always the Interstate Commerce commission. Another was the army engineers.

This time, under the guise of war emergency, there will be much less opposition to the President's wish for more power over these independent agencies, but it is thought that the ICC will be left free, as at present, even in the original request.

So far as moving the commission's headquarters to Chicago is concerned there will be plenty of wails from the personnel. Most of the ICC clerks have been on the job for years. They have their roots deep in Washington and will not like the idea of pulling them up.

But there is much to be said for the proposal, and if the transfer could be made gradually, it probably could be done with little hardship.

Coarse Foods Can Result in Serious Trouble

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

AS CONSTIPATION is due in the majority of cases to a slow-acting or lazy bowel, home treatment for many years past has been the eating of coarse foods. This is good treatment because coarse foods such as whole-wheat bread, bran muffins, nut and fruit bread, oatmeal, tapioca, and bran all have much roughage. It is this roughage that slightly irritates the walls of the large intestine, causing more action.

While the above foods are excellent for the lazy bowels, they have the opposite and a harmful effect on a bowel, that is constipated because of spasms. These spasms, caused by spasms or contractions of the muscles of the bowel, partly close it so that the wastes cannot pass onward out of the bowel. The individual is usually of the nervous or emotional type whose stomach and intestine are easily upset or subject to spasms (spastic). To give coarse foods in this case will cause spasms and constipation, and also diarrhea due to the great amount of irritation caused by the rough foods. This condition of a spastic bowel, with constipation alternating with diarrhea, is spoken of as a spastic colon and colitis.

Dr. Barton

Coarse Foods Aggravate. While most of these cases are due to nervousness, or at least nervousness is the underlying cause, the condition in some cases has been greatly aggravated by coarse foods being eaten in large quantities in an endeavor to cure constipation. Some cases are kept in almost continuous spasm because, in addition to coarse foods, harsh purgatives are used. In acute cases of spastic bowel or colitis, nothing but milk or other liquids are used for a few days. In the usual or chronic case diet consists of cream, soft-boiled eggs, strained cereals, cottage cheese, butter, custards, plain cookies, white bread, orange juice, strained vegetables, cream soups, beef, lamb, chicken, and baked fish.

Remember, coarse foods are helpful when bowel is sluggish, but harmful when bowel is overactive with spasms.

Use of Serums For Poison Ivy AS THE poison ivy season approaches, victims of this type of allergy look around for some method of protecting themselves. As the symptoms of poison ivy are much like those of hives and food poisoning, it is natural that research workers and drug manufacturers should be experimenting with a serum to prevent attacks of poison ivy just as with hay fever, eczema and other allergic conditions.

The result has been various methods of using the vaccine or serum idea. This is, that a tiny amount of an offending food or other substance put under the skin or taken by mouth will cause the body to manufacture protective substances to overcome large amounts of the offending substances should they be eaten, or the body come in contact with them. While this idea or principle works out well in hay fever, asthma, eczema, stomach and intestinal upsets, it has not worked out so well in prevention of poison ivy.

Chewing the young leaves, taking "tincture" of poison ivy by mouth or by injection are methods used.

Dr. Leon Goldman, Cincinnati, in Journal of Medicine, states that the difficulty is due to being unable to measure the dose given that will prevent the attacks and yet not give the patient too severe a reaction. Research workers report most undesirable effects when leaves have been chewed, such as severe swelling of the tongue and lining of the mouth, which causes the patient to feel that he will choke to death. Even when the serum manufactured from poison ivy has been injected, there has been great skin irritation at and around the point where the serum was injected.

The lesson from the above is that, while injections for poison ivy appear to be effective in many cases, the proper doses in individual cases is at present hard to determine.

QUESTION BOX Q.—What causes chapped lips? What causes dark circles under the eyes?

A.—Chapped lips and dark circles under eyes may be due to lack of vitamins and minerals in the food or to a run-down condition. See your physician and get blood checked for iron and calcium. Q.—Please advise the main symptoms of cirrhosis of the liver. A.—Indigestion is main symptom of cirrhosis of the liver. Keeping bowels active is important.

TIPS to Gardeners

BULB SUBSTITUTES

WITH the supply of many popular spring-flowering bulbs cut off because of the war in Europe, gardeners are seeking certain substitutes.

The color and form of many annual flowers makes them excellent choices for replacing the bulb favorites. As in the case of bulbs, the seed of these annuals may be planted in the early fall, for blossoming early the following summer.

The fresh yellow color of Daffodils, for instance, may be captured nearly as well in the petals of Sunshine Calendula, or in the rich hues of California Poppy (Extra Golden). The shape of the California Poppy and the Shirley Poppy closely approaches the typical Tulip shape.

The soft colors associated with the Tulip may be replaced best by Larkspur, with its tints of white, blue, pink, rose, lilac, and carmine. The newer, tall-growing Super Majestic Larkspurs are most desirable.

The blossom-crowded spikes of Snapdragons are likened by many to the Hyacinth. It is best to grow the dwarf rust-resistant strains of Snapdragons, with attractive varieties such as Compact Bedding Bronze, and Salmon Pink adaptable also because of their suitability for massed bedding, as Tulips are so often used.

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY W.N.U. Release

INSTALLMENT 8

THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches which stretched from Texas to Montana. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, undertook to break Thorpe's power.

CHAPTER X—Continued

Dry Camp Pierce still loafed at the Pot Hook, dejected, hopeless. No one knew what he was waiting for. Roper never heard from the rest of them now. In spite of everything that Maxim could do, the Rangers were on the loose. The wild bunch that had threatened to dominate Texas was broken and split, scattered far and wide, every man for himself. Day and night, a saddle pony waited beside the door of the bunkhouse in which Roper slept.

Now, unexpectedly, came Shoshone Wilce.

Nothing could tell more of Roper's present position than this:—as Shoshone Wilce rode up, Bill Roper already had his gun in his hand, and the other hand upon the bridle rein of his pony.

Shoshone Wilce almost tumbled into Bill Roper's arms. He grabbed Bill by both lapels of the black, town-going coat that Roper always wore when he was about to travel a long way. Shoshone's bottle-nose gleamed and quivered, and his eyes were like shoe buttons.

"It's done! He's bust—he's split—he's cracked!"

"What are you talking about?"

"Cleve Tanner! I tell you, he's gone to hell!"

Suddenly Bill Roper turned into the unaccountable kid that his years justified. Like a man suddenly coming alive, he took Shoshone by the throat, shook him as if he had weighed no more than a cat. His teeth showed bare and set.

He said, "Shoshone—you fool with me."

Shoshone cried out through the grip on his throat, "I tell you, Cleve Tanner!"

He couldn't say any more.

Bill Roper was cool again, now.

"What makes you think so?"

"He failed his delivery at the Red. Where he was supposed to bring up fifteen thousand head, a little handful of punchers showed up with a few hundred. He can't round his cattle—if he's got any cattle—and he can't make delivery at the Red!"

"We didn't believe you," Shoshone Wilce babbled on. "We all said it couldn't be done. But by gosh, we've done it! All over Texas, Tanner's notes are being called, as the word spreads. Wells Fargo refuses to honor his signature for a dime. They say now that Ben Thorpe won't back Tanner—Thorpe denies him, and the Tanner holdings are being closed up and sold out."

"You sure?" Roper asked, looking up from the ground again.

"Am I sure? You think I'd risk my damn throat coming here to tell you something like this, if I didn't know for sure?"

"No," Roper admitted, "I guess not."

"It's all over," Shoshone tried to tell him. "Can't you realize it, man?"

"No," Roper said.

CHAPTER XI

Strolling, easy-going, but somehow reluctant, Bill Roper walked the streets of Tascosa, between the false-fronted wooden buildings that lined the hoof-stirred dust.

Sooner or later, he knew, Cleve Tanner would appear upon this one main street. Everybody knew that Tanner was on the warpath, determined to seek out Bill Roper. It was said that Tanner's only remaining interest was to bring down the youngster who had cut Texas from under him.

Yet ten days passed before Cleve Tanner came.

It was eleven o'clock on a sunny Saturday morning when Dry Camp Pierce brought Bill the word.

"Well, kid, he's here. You were right again—you won't have to hunt him out. He's looking for you; all you have to do is wait."

"Where is he now?"

"In some bar, a block up the street. He's walking from bar to bar, asking if you've been seen. You might as well wait for him here."

"No," Roper said. "I'll walk out and meet him, I think."

Dry Camp peered up into his face.

"Kid, you look sick!"

"I don't feel real happy," Roper admitted.

"Draw deliberate and slow," Pierce counseled. "Take your time—don't hurry, whatever you do. But don't waste any time, either. Fast and smooth—"

"I get you," Roper said with a flicker of a grin. "Take my time, but be quick about it. Move plenty slow, but fast as hell. All right, Dry Camp!"

He gave the butt of his gun a hitch to make sure it was loose in its leather; then he spun the whiskey away from him untasted, and walked out.

Dry Camp Pierce looked at the full glass, and exchanged a worried glance with the bartender. Then he followed Bill.

Dry Camp kept blinking his eyes in the bright light, as if they were dry; and there were white patches at the corners of his mouth.

"Don't give him too much of a break, kid. He's awful bad. But

His first step was to start a cattle war in Texas. He made this decision against the opposition of Lew Gordon and the fearful pleading of his sweetheart, Jody Gordon. The raids upon Thorpe's herds were successful at first, but resistance was soon put up which caused Roper's men to leave him, one by one. Cleve Tanner, manager of Thorpe's Texas holdings, appeared not to feel the losses inflicted upon him. Roper's resources were dwindling low, and he seemed doomed to failure.

He was surprised to hear her say that. He had no way of knowing how much she had heard, or what she had heard, about his shoot-out with Cleve Tanner.

"A notch? I hadn't thought anything about it."

All her bitter contempt of the lonely-riding men of violence came into her voice. "Isn't that what the gunmen and the cow thieves always do?"

He was motionless a long time. Then he drew the skinning knife that always swung at the back of his belt in a worn sheath. Its blade was lean and hollowed, worn almost out of existence by a thousand honings. He stood looking at the knife; he tossed it in the air, and caught it by the handle again.

"I wouldn't go cutting marks on the handle of a gun," he said at last. His voice was thick. "Nobody cares what anybody does to the handle of a gun."

Roper stepped forward, and with the keen blade cut a notch clean and deep in the left arm of Dusty's cross.

When he looked at Jody she was staring at him strangely, almost as if she were afraid.

All through the afternoon Jody Gordon had ridden the barren trails above Ogallala, on a pony that forever tried to turn home. Thaw was on the prairie again, and the South Platte was brimming with melted snow; in the air was something of the damp, clean smell which had marked another spring, in this same place. But it was now more than six months since Jody had seen Bill Roper; and she found it no help that she was forever hearing his name.

It was with reluctance that she at last rode up the rise upon which it stood, unlighted, in the dusk.

She unsaddled her own pony, booted it into the muddy corral, and threw the forty pound kake onto the saddle-pole with the easy, one-handed swing of the western rider. As she turned toward the house she was trying not to cry.

Then, as she walked through the stable, a figure rose up from the shadows beside the door and barred her way.

Jody Gordon's breath caught in her throat. She said, evenly, "Looking for someone, Bud?"

The spare-framed visitor took off his hat and held it uneasily in his two hands. "Well, I tell you, Miss Gordon—could I speak to you for just a minute? I'll tell you the fact of the matter. I'm a Bill Roper man."

Jody Gordon's heart jumped like a struck pony. "Bill sent you to me?"

"I haven't seen Bill Roper. But—I've seen Ben Thorpe. Miss Gordon, tell me one thing: Is your father backing Bill Roper? I mean, is he backing this plowing into Ben Thorpe?"

"My father," Jody Gordon said, "has quit Bill Roper in every way he possibly could."

"That's what I thought," Shoshone Wilce said. "Only trouble is, people that don't know the difference, they don't none of them believe that any more."

Jody Gordon interrupted him sharply. "What's happened?"

"Miss Gordon, your father is in a terrible bad fix. I'm afraid—I'm afraid he's going to die before this thing is through."

"What do you mean?"

"Most people think Lew Gordon is backing Bill Roper—maybe you know that? Well, now there's a feller rode to Ben Thorpe from Miles City—a feller that was a foreman with Thorpe's Montana outfits under Walk Lasham. Maybe this feller had some kind of fight with Lasham—I don't know nothing about that. But this feller swears to Thorpe that Lasham is letting the Montana herds drain away to the Indians, and to the construction camps, and Ben Thorpe never seeing a penny of the money from beef or hide."

"Is Bill Roper gutting the Thorpe outfits in Montana?"

"Don't know, myself. They say he's swarming all over Montana, with a bunch of kid renegades behind him, riding like crazy men, and raiding night after night. Some say nobody knows how hard Lasham is hurt, Lasham least of any; and some say Lasham has sold out to Bill Roper, or your father—or both."

"What does Thorpe himself think?"

"Thorpe thinks your father has bought Walk Lasham. Just the same as he thought your father bought Cleve Tanner in Texas, until Bill Roper gunned Cleve down. And Thorpe is fit to be tied. A man like him—he's terrible dangerous always, Miss Gordon; but now he's ten times more dangerous than he ever was in his life."

"You mean you think Ben Thorpe will—"

"Miss Gordon, I know. Ben Thorpe is going to kill Lew Gordon, just as sure as—"

THE CHURCH ENLARGING ITS FELLOWSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:1-9, 14-17, 25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word.—Acts 8:4.

In a time characterized by materialism and commercialism, it is refreshing to consider the manner in which the early church spread the gospel far and wide. They did this without thought of personal gain or advantage, and with a sacrificial devotion to Christ which caused men and women to be willing to die for Him, and what may sometimes be even harder, to live for Him in the face of persecution. Here was loyalty that puts expediency to shame, and sacrifice of self for Christian principle which needs emphasis in this "soft" age.

The enlarging of the church is revealed by our lesson as being

I. By Death or by Life (vv. 1-4).

Stephen, one of the deacons, "a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost" (6:5), was stoned because of his testimony for Christ. He became the first martyr of the church, leading the line of those noble men and women who down to our own day have been ready to die rather than to deny Christ. The day may not be too far distant when some of us may face that decision. Are we ready?

To every one of us who is a Christian comes the necessity of living for Christ. Some in Jerusalem did (v. 2), some were imprisoned (v. 3), but notice that the others were scattered abroad, like brands from a fire, carrying the message of God's Word. They were not afraid, did not go into hiding, nor did they "adjust" their message to meet the circumstances. They went "everywhere preaching the word."

While persecution may sometimes hinder the spread of the gospel, it also frequently stirs the zeal of God's people to preach and teach. Just now in the midst of the havoc of war and persecution the good news of salvation is spreading in lands which hitherto knew it not. Are you and I doing our part?

II. By Preaching That Brought Joy (vv. 5-8).

Philip, a layman (the first of many great evangelists) and a Jew, went to the despised Samaritans with the gospel, and God so signally blessed his ministry that a great revival broke out and "there was much joy in the city."

What we need is more gospel preaching and teaching. You laymen, please note that you are not to wait for the preacher to do it. Spread the good news yourself. And note too that it is to be preached to all people, even to those whom we might (humanly speaking) be tempted to despise, either by reason of race or position in life. It was a glorious thing that happened to Philip in Samaria. It can happen again, and "it can happen here."

III. By Fellowship That Brought Blessing (vv. 14-17).

When the church at Jerusalem heard what had happened in Samaria, they were overjoyed, and sent two of their leaders, Peter and John, to encourage and counsel with the new converts.

Such fellowship always brings blessing, and in this case it was unusual blessing; namely, the gift of the Holy Spirit. On this occasion God thus gave these new Samaritan believers the blessing and power of the Holy Spirit in such a way as to bind them in fellowship to the church in Jerusalem. Jew and Gentile believers in Christ thus were joined in one communion of love and faith.

IV. By Broadened Vision That Brought Action (v. 25).

Peter and John had completed their work in Samaria and were on their way home to Jerusalem, but what they had seen had given them a new vision. They acted on that vision, and as they passed through the villages of Samaria they "preached the gospel" with joyful hearts. What an interest and stir they must have created!

It is one thing to see an opportunity and a need; it is quite another to do something about it. For that, one needs determination of purpose. As Lloyd George put it, "You cannot fight a winning battle with a retreating mind." These apostles were reaching out for God, and under His leadership and blessing, into the villages of Samaria.

The Christian church needs more real consecrated action; that is, in the name of Christ and for His glory. The business man who conducts his secular affairs with enthusiasm and dispatch, often forgets all that in his church duties. He advertises and seeks new markets for his goods, but is not interested in the outreach of the church. He can get excited about the Rotary Club or the Lions or what not, but never develops the slightest enthusiasm about the Lord's work. It goes without saying that such a "picture" is all out of focus. Let's make it right. Vision? Yes, by all means. But also action for God.

THE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Ma—

Well you will laugh at this ma but the army has learned me how to make a bed. If I get out of this war safe and back in plain close no matter how bad the employment situashun is I can get a job as a chambermade. Making beds is one thing I never thought I would be a expert at but it is one of the first things you get instructed at in a draft camp. I never paid no attention all my life to bed making. I just got out in the morning and from all I knew it was all done autermatically but I am now a first class bed maker and some nice girl could use me as a housekeeper.

I no this will surprise you more than anything tho mom when I tell you I am a Grade A dishwasher. They call this kitchen police detail but I do not know where the police part comes in as I never seen no cop doing dishes but they tell me in the army that they call any dirty work police work. Well anyhow I put in a hole day washing dishes and if you ever ask me to help with the pots and pans hereafter and I refews I will apolergize becuz it will be a picknick compared to what washing dishes is up here. You don't wash a plate at a time. You wash 'em in bunches and you have to be a combernashun Japaneze jugler, kitchen canary and all around mopper-upper. I have got so good at it that if I had a race with a electric dish washing machine it would take a photo to pick the winner.

The breakage is not heavy which is a big disappointment as I would like to bust more than I do but the crockery they use in the army is more like cement lawn furniture. You can drop a coffee cup on the floor and it will bounce rite back and hit you on the jaw. I dropped a saucer yesterday and it made a hole in the floor big enough for two men to go threw. I never new there was so many dishes in the army and believe me I never seen no physical training that hardens muscles like just lifting army china. I know a private who dislocated two ribs lifting a saucer. The sergeant says the dishes are just for eating but he can't fool me. If war comes they will be used for throwing.

My hand and arms up to the rist is all pink and puffy from being in the hot water so many hours at a stretch and when I can't sleep now I don't count sheep I just count dirty dishes. I had a terrible dream last night. I dreamed I had to do all the pans and broilers all over a second time. You know how the pans and broilers are all stuck up after a big Thanksgiving dinner at home, ma, well there is twice as much goo on 'em up here and I think the skipper puts a coat of hard varnish over it to make it all the harder.

I do not like it much as it does not seem to have much glammer and in all the stories I read about war heroes I never noticed a dish washer being mentioned. The sergeant says Napoleon started as a dish washer washing French pastery dishes witch is why they call him Napoleon but he is kidding I gess.

All the boys is talking about the rumor that this training will last longer than a year, maybe for two years but I wud not mind it so much pervided I could go home winters as the life the last winter was so tuff even those Finns would of been soar. I see Washington says the report is strictly balony but most of us has our fingers crost becuz the lease lend bill is passed and anybody knows that nobody who borrows anything ever gives it back under a couple of years.

Any way ma do not worry as I am still okay except for soar feet, a bad hangnail and a little touch of newmonnia but I am so busy washing dishes that it takes my mind off my suffering.

Your loving son,

Oscar.

Restaurateur Believed Himself Well Supplied

The couple had enjoyed a meal in the restaurant. When the bill was presented the husband was horrified to discover he had come out without money.

Calling the proprietor, he explained the situation, ending up with:

"It won't take me long to slip home, and my wife will remain here as security."

"Pardon me," said the proprietor, "haven't you anything else?"

"Sir," snapped the customer angrily, "are you insinuating that my wife is not worth the $1.50?"

"Not at all," the proprietor protested, "but I already have a wife!"
